FOREWORD

This Classification, while etiologic in its terms, is arranged in as simple a form as possible in order that it may be readily used by the record librarian of any hospital, who, presumably, has not had a medical education. A full general index is printed at the end of the book, containing page reference to every term, so that no difficulty should be experienced in properly locating a disease under its Section. Clinical catalogues may be arranged in exact accordance with the Classification, using guides of different colors as divisional and diagnosis headings.

The arrangement of diseases in a given Section, or a subdivision of a Section, is strictly alphabetical. The classification number consists of the combination of Section Number and International Classification Number, e.g., Appendicitis is 24-117; 24 indicating that it is to be filed in Section XXIV, and 117 showing its proper classification under International Numbers, by which annual statistics may be compiled. If, at any time, it is desirable to add to a Section a new term, it may be done by inserting it in its proper alphabetical place without rearrangement of the present list.

A blank page has been allowed between every two Sections upon which additional terms, or notes, may be entered.
